British Second And Yank First Armies May Be In All-Out Advance

Win Bridgeheads

The Germans said the American Ninth army already had won several bridgeheads—at least four located—across the Roer. The whole battle area was aflame from the Allied cannonading, the Germans said.

They described the blow as the offensive that had been expected from the West in coordination with the Red army drive from the East—a strong hint that the British Second army also was on the move.

The western drive, a DNE news agency broadcast said, "probably will be the signal for the resumption of the Soviet large scale offensive. The German high command is anticipating such a general, all-out coordinated assault against the Reich."

There was no immediate confirmation of the enemy report at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters, but there were strong indications that the long-awaited knockout drive from the West was under way or about to begin.

The first thundering salvoes of the offensive may have been fired yesterday in the tremendous aerial bombardment that paralyzed the railway system across central and western Germany.

Airmen Blast Railways

Almost 9,000 Allied bombers and fighters from Italy and the western fields bombed and gunned the Nazi communications system from dawn to dark yesterday, littering German railway and road lines with the wreckage of 4,000 locomotives, rail cars and motor vehicles.

Frantic German air raid warnings indicated the Allied air forces were winging back over the Reich again this morning in brilliantly clear weather to pile new destruction on the smoking enemy homeland.

German accounts of the fighting on the western front said "the fifth and most tremendous battle has flared up in the Aachen sector."

Trans-ocean said four crossings of the Roer were made in the opening hours of the offensive. Two columns forced the river above and below Linlich, 27 miles west of Cologne, while two others broke into the Cologne plain opposite Niederau and Krefeld, three and four miles south of Dueren.

Twin Allied drives were in progress at the same time on the northern and southern flanks of the Cologne plain. The Canadian First Army in the North was within a mile northwest of the German anchor town of Calcar, threatening a breakthrough to the Rhine crossings barely 20 miles from the Ruhr.

The American Third army in the south fought to close a pincers around a 17-mile stretch of the Siegfried line between Pruem and Echternach. The Americans took six German towns and villages in that sector in the last 24 hours and gained as much as 2½ miles at some points. Farther south the Americans won three footholds across the Saar river north and south of captured Saarburg. Spearheads were only five miles from Trier in the Moselle-Saar triangle.

The American Seventh army

still farther south had a small foothold inside the Saar basin east of Sarbrücken. The Americans held two-thirds of Forbach early today and were fighting from house to house.

Brief fighting was in progress on the Italian front, where the weather had improved somewhat. It was announced that Brazilian and American troops of the Fifth army broke through stiff German resistance in the Mount Belvedere sector to capture two more important Appennine peaks and a village. The Brazilians took Mount Castello and the Americans Mount Della Torracca, both northeast of Mount Belvedere.

UNION CHIEFS PLAN PROTEST ON WAGE REPORT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23—The AFL and CIO planned vigorous protests to President Roosevelt today over the decision of public members of the War Labor Board that "the time has not yet come" to break the Little Steel wage formula.

CIO members of the board hinted they might withdraw entirely from the labor-industry-public agency. It was a walkout of labor members that ended the defense mediation board, the WLB's predecessor.

Labor has been plugging for more than a year for general wage increases outside the Little Steel formula, which limits raises to 15 percent above January, 1941, levels. Most organized workers reached the 15 percent ceiling some time ago.

Last night the four public members of the board gave their opinion:

No general wage increases for the present. Still too much danger of inflation "which would be disastrous to the war effort and to the economic security of all segments of our population."

The public members' decision, backed by the board's four industry members, now goes to Economic Stabilizer Fred H. Vinson for transmission to the President. Vinson, who has the tough job of holding down both wages and prices, is expected to add his approval before passing the report on to Mr. Roosevelt.

MAMMOTH RAID PLANNING AIRED

innermost part of the underground operations block of headquarters. The room was only 30 feet long by 15 feet wide. Maps were on every wall. A long table was placed in the middle and at the upper end were four lounge chairs.

Without preliminaries, one of the most historic raid plans in the history of the air force began. Officers, some of them looking like college boys, sat around the general or stood behind him. The general leaned forward in his chair without speaking. Before him was a weather map.

"Probable fog on ground bases . . . This came without prompting from Maj. Peter Truett, 26, of Stevens, Ark., weather briefing officer. "For around three to five-tenths . . . low clouds around 5,000 to 6,000 feet . . ."

When Truett finished it was just 4:11.

Anderson sat with his chin in his hands. Abruptly he said:

"Let's have the maps."

This was the layout of targets chosen for the day.

The talk moved rapidly from there on and was hard to catch. The general asked about targets, about flak pools and routes and checked with Truett for more weather information.

At 4:16 p. m. the general was gazing absently at a large wall map. At the right of him a chart showed details of an Eighth Air Force raid then in progress.

He sat down again after two minutes and for seven minutes there was silence. Finally Anderson said:

"Let's get enough targets north and southwest of Berlin to absorb at least one full division."

The general said he wanted the route to miss heavy guns and he wanted to hit rail yards. If he could not hit freight yards, he wanted railroad bridges, viaducts and roadbeds. He was going to put in a raid at 7,000 to 12,000 feet.

Fighter, gun and navigation experts, young colonels and boys, faced captains, spoke to the general. He agreed with them or checked them and made decisions. Thirty-six minutes after the conference began, he left the room. He returned at 10 p. m. for a final conference.

Meanwhile, supreme headquarters which broadly had directed the plans reported on to all divisions of the air force.

In a final 50-minute conference, Anderson settled the final details of the raid.

It had long been apparent that what he was shaping up was the boldest attack ever made by the Eighth Air Force—two dozen targets to be hit with bomber groups scattered over the Reich at record low level.

"We'll know a great deal more about the Luftwaffe at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon," one staff officer remarked.

"Hell, yes," answered another. "Never has man done anything more insulting to the Luftwaffe than this."

DADDY'S LAST LETTER

HOUSTON, Tex.—One-month-old Sylvia Ann Palmer had a little dog once, but she will never see him. She also had a father once, but she will never see him either. In the last letter that Lt. Herchel E. Palmer wrote before he was killed in France, he told of how he had obtained a tiny rat terrier from a French family, which he intended to give to his tiny daughter when he came home.

1. Earliest possible defeat of the enemy.

2. Control of the Axis countries so that they never again can marshal the military or industrial strength to wage war.

3. Determination that people everywhere can choose their own forms of government.

4. Creation of a world organization before the war ends that will be able to keep the peace, by force if necessary.

5. Closer collaboration among all nations toward a rising standard of living and wider opportunities for all men and women, regardless of race, creed or color.

Stettinius reaffirmed the good neighbor policy and the United States' belief that the new world order must be built by all nations, large and small, acting as sovereign equals.

NAZIS STARVE AMERICANS IN PRISON CAMP

Yanks Face Systematic Undernourishment To Weaken Resistance

"What the blank are you doing in France?"

At divisional headquarters, the Germans compelled the prisoners to march 15 hours without food or water. They were fed for the first time in four days after their capture when they were confined in starvation manor.

Get Little Food

At "Starvation Manor" the Germans would butcher one cow a day, taking all the meat and leaving only the udders for 200 prisoners to use in making soup. Starved American officers ate the cow's congealed blood to keep alive.

The sole food given the prisoners in the course of their six-day journey to Western Germany was one loaf of bread. French civilians who tried to feed the Americans at wayside stations were chased away by the German guards.

The stories told by McCormick and Olevsky were substantially the same as those told by Capt. Eugene Witt, Richland, Mich., and 2nd Lt. James Schildt, Long Island City, who suffered solitary confinement for various periods while they were captives.

Jan. 21, when the Red Army entered Ekin, Poland, the Americans watched for several days the Russians speeding westward in pursuit of the Germans.

McCormick said the Russians "were the roughest, hardest troops I've seen, going straight to their objective oblivious of cold or danger."

COUNTY VETS TO BE GUESTS AT RAINBOW MEET

Many Pickaway county men will join their former "buddies" Saturday night when the annual reunion and banquet of the 166th Infantry Regiment of the famed Rainbow Division of World War I is held at 7 p. m. in the Chittenden hotel in Columbus.

The 166th received its baptism of fire 27 years ago Thursday when members went into the trenches in the Lunenburg sector of France.

Col. Benson Hough was regimental commander of the 166th. Two captains of the regiment will not attend the reunion because they are busy now in the Pacific as General Douglas MacArthur and Gen. Robert Beightler.

Hank Gowdy, first major league baseball player to enlist in World War I and recently discharged after duty in World War II, will be toastmaster. Speakers will include Governor Frank J. Lausche and Mayor James Rhodes of Columbus.

of week-long attempts by C. owner Grady C. Terry to halt the execution.

"Every dog is entitled to a day in court and I'm going to see that Woof gets hers," Terry said, when he heard the death sentence.

The city council refused to hear his plea that Woof be saved and authorities at the city animal shelter said the owners' orders were final.

But Terry persisted and said he was prepared to take the case to Gov. Earl Warren if all other legal means failed.

Terry's application for the show cause order, prepared by Attorney Morris Lavine, said that Woof was "fit and able" and might be valuable for military service on other purposes.

"We feel there is no just provocation for executing Woof," Terry said, happy in his success at delaying, at least, the death sentence.

The Dendergers had refused hundreds of written and telephone pleas to rescind the death order because, they said, they would never "have peace of mind if Woof was given the opportunity to repeat her act."

Just how the Dendergers felt about last night's reprieve, was not determined. They were believed to be out of the city, seeking rest and quiet after the tragedy. Sgt. Denderger had been scheduled to return to his post at Camp Berkeley, Tex., on Saturday.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

Back in the United States after serving 16 months with an Army Air Forces weather squadron at a base on the Mackenzie River in Northwestern Canada, Sergeant Donald R. Beatty is now stationed at Grenier Field, near Manchester, New Hampshire, awaiting reassignment to a new station. He recently enjoyed a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Beatty, 633 North Court street, and his wife, Mildred, who lives in Akron.

Inducted into the Army in December of 1942, Sergeant Beatty graduated from the Weather Observer's School at Chanute Field, Ill., the following March. For additional training he was then sent to the National Airport, Washington, D. C., where, in August of 1943, he completed a course in Radiosonde, a highly specialized meteorological science concerned with obtaining data about the nature of the air above the surface of the earth.

A graduate of Circleville High school in 1938 and of Tri-State Engineering College, Angola, Ind., Sergeant Beatty was employed as an aeronautical engineer by the Goodyear Aircraft Corporation of Akron before entering the service.

Henry Bloomfield (Roy), who is with a hospital unit in England working in a supply breakdown, recently handled canned corn with the Winor label. He sent one of the labels to his sister, Mrs. Kenneth Jacobs, of Circleville Route 1, telling her how glad he was to see something from his home town. He will have been in overseas service one year in April. His address is: Pfc. Henry Bloomfield, ASN 35218600, 91st General Hospital, APO 204, c-o Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

William C. Heggie, formerly of Circleville, sends this as his correct new address: M/Sgt. William C. Heggie, ASN 35293674, 3230th Ordnance Depot Co., APO 18257, New York, N. Y.

Private Ivan G. Carothers, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Carothers, of East Union street, has a new address: Pvt. Ivan G. Carothers, ASN 35885081, 924th Signal Co., 1st ADG, Kelly Field, Texas.

Private Paul Hang, former manager of Isaly's store, has been returned from Europe where he was wounded in action. He is in Ward 206, Ashford General hospital, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Mrs. Hang and children are living on South Scioto street.

Private Howard M. Schumm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Schumm, of Watt street, has this as his new address: Pvt. Howard M. Schumm, ASN 35891136, Co.

A, 11th Bn., 4th Tng. Regt., Fort McClellan, Alabama.

First Sergeant Thomas D. Harman, whose wife, Katherine Foreman Harman, lives at 325 South Court street, will have a birthday anniversary April 2 and would enjoy hearing from his friends. He is serving with General Patton's 3rd Army. His address is: ASN 35424102, 257th Ard. M. M. Co., APO 403, c-o Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

MOORE 3/C Everett Ferguson, who has been serving in the Navy for 27 months, arrived Thursday to spend a 30-day furlough with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. O. L. Ferguson, East Ohio street, and other relatives in Circleville.

As a member of a destroyer crew he saw action in two major Pacific battles, Gilbert and Marshall islands, and recently returned from the Philippines.

STOKER FUNERAL SERVICE SATURDAY IN COLUMBUS

Active pallbearers for Mr. Stoker will be Charles G. McCune, Nathan Beck, Thomas J. Tully, George C. Bobb, Orr S. Zimmerman and H. C. Allread, Columbus. The honorary pallbearers will be Harry Brinker, Harold M. Gardner, Chester M. Rose, Fred C. Rector, Edgar T. Wolfe, William McDowell, Hazard Okey, Paul Carroll, Richard Dumond, Roland W. Miller, Walter J. Beck, Charles H. John, L. W. St. John, George M. Trautman and John E. Powell.

Mr. Stoker, 54, an Ashville native, was owner of the Consumers' Wholesale Supply Co., Bexley. He was the husband of the former Grace Gearhart, and son-in-law of Mrs. Robert Gearhart, of North Court street.

COP'S TOO REALISTIC
COLUMBUS, O.—When City Patrolman Guy Dowler tells a story he believes in illustrating it. While relating to employees at the city clerk's office of a cutting he had investigated during the night, Dowler whipped out his penknife, made a slashing motion with it—and inflicted a four-inch gash along his jaw.

The way those Russian soldiers can move through snow and ice you'd think they invented the stuff.

U. S. CAPTIVE HONORED IN DEATH

GERMAN OFFICERS stand at attention with American prisoners of war at Stalag Luft III in Germany as the body of one of our men who died in the camp is about to be lowered into its grave. ASHVILLE

The Ashville-Lockbourne Lutheran Brotherhood met Wednesday evening at the Lockbourne Church. Following a pot-luck supper, a brief business meeting was held and the calendar for the year was made. The Brotherhood also voted to contribute $25 to each church in the charge to help meet current expenses. The social hour was spent in playing dart ball. The next meeting will be held in Ashville, March 21, with the meeting in charge of a committee headed by Will W. Fischer.

One of the most interesting P-T. A. meetings of the year was held Tuesday evening when the following program was given: Selections by the high school orchestra directed by Fred E. Brobat; Flag Drill and Songs by second grade; Reading on Founder's Day by Frederick Puckett; Recitation by Charles Trone; Tap dance by Mary Lou Cloud; Songs and Exercises by the local Boy Scout Troop under the direction of Scoutmaster Charles D. Eversole and Troop Committee Chairman Rev. Dwight Woodworth.

Lt. Belt of the Columbus Army Depot was introduced and made a most interesting talk on his experiences in World War II. Lt.

Belt was overseas in January 1942 in an artillery division, took part in the invasion of North Africa and Italy, and was severely wounded at Salerno. After being hospitalized for several weeks, he was transferred to the Quartermaster Corps and sent to Columbus.

During the business meeting it was decided to hold the annual basketball banquet with the time and date to be decided later. A committee was also appointed to study ways and means of securing a record player and amplifying system for the school.

Ashville—John Hay became ill at the home of Crissie Peters Wednesday and was unable to return home. Mr. Hay suffered severe hemorrhages of the nose, and was removed to Grant hospital, Columbus, Thursday.

Supt. Walter L. Harris and a group of high school boys worked most of the day Thursday at the Roll and Bowl setting up bleachers for the basketball tournament which entered the semi-final stage Thursday evening.

Of considerable interest to local fans was the defeat of Hamilton township in the Franklin county tournament. The local boys were hard pressed in both games with Hamilton winning by scores of 47-41 and 31-26; yet Hamilton lost two games in the Franklin county tournament to teams not considered nearly so capable.

Ashville—The Ashville Varsity all-opponent team, composed of boys who competed against Ashville during the season, follows: Forwards, Cavanaugh of Lancaster, St. Mary's and Hoover of Hamilton township; Center, Boughman of Akron Norton; Guards, Sims of Circleville and Wade of Columbus Central Second Team; Forwards, Meadows of Grove City, Zitzke of Hamilton township and Dunham of Akron Norton. Performance in the game against Ashville and not a season's play was the basis for the selections.

Ashville—In recent letters from their son, Cpl. Harold E. Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Meyers have received Harold's Good Conduct Ribbon and his service ribbon with three, bronze stars, representing the three major battles in which he has fought. Cpl. Meyers, a member of the 79th Division, is stationed in France.

Despite the desperate need of dairy products by the American armed forces and civilian population many hundreds of millions of pounds of milk are still going to waste annually through spoilage according to reports indicated from many states. This would make enough butter to feed 56,250 soldiers for one year . . .

This loss is more tragic because it can be avoided by a little extra effort and a little more careful planning on the farm where the bulk of this loss takes place. Ask your milk hauler how you can help prevent this loss.

LIBERAL FINANCING

PEOPLE who have been fearing a serious depression period after the present war seem unduly worried, when some of the government plans are taken into consideration. The home loan system provided by Congress under the Service Men's Readjustment Act of last year should be able, in itself, to set up a big wave of business activity and widespread jobs.

"Never before in the history of conventional mortgage financing," says a real estate expert, "has it been possible for a borrower to obtain 100 per cent cash for the purchase or construction of a home, or to borrow money for such purposes at as low a rate as 4 per cent. Both of these features have been made possible under the G. I. Bill." The veteran who procures a building loan can have it guaranteed or insured by the FHA and, on top of that, can get a guaranteed second mortgage to pay for the balance of the purchase price. There are naturally certain precautions insisted on, but apparently none which need interfere with the operation in normal cases.

With such generous credit and a swing back to other normal activities, business should soon be buzzing again.

BUSY LAKE MEN

THOUSANDS of Great Lakes seamen who volunteer for deep-sea duty during the winter are now returning to their regular posts for the coming season. These men gave up their usual winter's rest to respond to an urgent appeal for more help on salt-water. They not only had new and different experience, but they also made it possible for our fighting forces to receive vital supplies without which they could not have gone ahead so rapidly. They have made, according to Deputy War Shipping Administrator Edward Macauley, a vital contribution to the war.

And now they are preparing in a matter of fact way for what is expected to be an even bigger task than last year's record-breaking movement of 184,155,384 tons of iron ore and other cargoes on the Lakes. They are earning the respect and gratitude of a nation and a world at war, as they carry grain, coal and iron without which it could not be won.

"Old-fashioned" for some people has been a word of praise, but nobody uses the word that way when speaking of this year's old-fashioned Winter.

Modest men are now beginning to worry about their shirts and undershirts, with everything getting so short.

A couple of years ago everyone was talking about Malta. Now it's Yalta.

The Nazis still show a stout front, but the band is playing a funeral march.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 — All inner, as well as public accounts of the LIVADIA understanding indicate the Russian position has been accepted on most issues as the working basis for postwar.

The bulk of senators and representatives have reached this private conclusion, excepting of course the new presiding vice president, Mr. Truman, who thinks Mr. Roosevelt won practically everything, he is apt to be a bit partisan in the matter.

The general run of congress is noting that headquarters for reparations are to be in Moscow, the Curzon line was accepted, as well as the basic Lublin government for Poland and the Tito dominating regime in Yugoslavia, and most important—the voting setup of the United Nations to handle future war makers.

The particular visible point that Mr. Roosevelt won was a prescription for free and secret elections eventually in the many small European nations (Atlantic charter), and the yet invisible promise of Russian war against our enemy—Japan.

The limited evidence on the conference thus clearly shows Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill yielded on the political issues in order to get any agreement at all (Russia clearly was not eager) and they preserved their democratic ideals, at least in the language of the understanding.

You would not be able to guess it from the public reaction here, but congress does not like this. Furthermore, contradictory as it may sound, congress, or the senate, will probably approve the settlement.

Such a momentum for some kind of a peace agreement — any kind of a peace agreement in fact—has been built up that nearly any kind can be approved.

Michigan's Senator Vandenberg, for a good example, issued half-pleased comment, pointing out he had won his point that the immediate postwar governments in these countries would be subject to later electoral review.

Ohio's Senator Burton, back from Europe, says the soldiers want a peace agreement and are not particular as to what it is.

People at large do not pay much attention to details of these international commitments, in fact do not attempt to understand them fully.

Everyone here seems to figure Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected last November because he claimed and was thought to be more competent than Dewey to handle Stalin and Churchill in international negotiations—an indispensable man for that task, in fact.

There is not much inclination to look askance at what he got out of it, especially with part of it not made public. Opposition thus far has just about been limited to Senator Wheeler.

Even if the unpublished part of the agreement is as forecast, such fatalism has taken hold here that any heavy struggling is discouraged.

Nearly everyone thus is trying to cast the best possible light on the achievement to the disregard of its nature. It is being said that Russia was in control of Europe anyway, and, therefore, if we got anything, it is all to the good.

If effective action to prevent war making by any of the Big Five proves impossible under the settlement, well, then, we can at least ourselves veto aggressions by other nations in Latin America.

If the prospect that "free elections" in Europe will not include democratic freedom of press and speech in a preparatory campaign by all parties, but may be continued on Page Eight

Drinking Water From the Sea

THIS war has called on science for nearly everything it needs. In fact it is no great compliment to science, but a war of this destructiveness and scope could not have been fought if science had any social conscience. However, what is, is, and there seems little hope of improving things now, so we may study a few of the ingeniousities of scientific contributions to wartime conditions.

Concentrated Foods

One is the group problem of providing men with concentrated food and means of survival under conditions of being lost at sea and in the desert. Professor Ivy, of Northwestern University, is the authority for the following statements about being lost at sea on a raft.

The question of deprivation of food is not very serious. An adult may survive 40 days without food. If the temperature is moderate and humid an adult can go 18 days without food or water, that is the record. The longest record of survival at sea, without water, is eleven days.

Commander Poppen

In July 1940, Commander Poppen foresaw the need of water for survivors on rubber rafts which were then being placed in air-planes, and each raft was provided with some cans of fresh water. But these were inadequate because they took up too much space.

There were some skeptics who believed the idea that sea water could not be used, was simply a superstition, but actual experiments soon proved that such was not the case. The salts in sea water upset the electrolytic balance of the body and the excessive salt taken in had to be excreted by the kidneys and actually contributed to dehydration.

Several Researches

Several researches were undertaken to attempt to make sea water drinkable. First a method of removing the chlorine was devised, but it left the sodium and, while it was not as poisonous as sea water, it was not perfect.

Finally Lieutenant Spearman, Jr., found that all salt could be removed from sea water by the addition of uric acid, and that 7½ volumes of potable water was produced for one volume of chemical equipment, which is very economical. Then the Permutit method was added so that in one end of a bag a filter is placed and with the aid of this and by one precipitation in the bag, drinkable water is obtained.

The bag and a can of chemical equipment with a volume of 700 c.c. will yield 3,000 c.c. of potable water, and this equipment will extend chances of survival six times longer than the fresh water placed in a can of the same space.

This account makes us realize that such successes are not the result of a single experiment by a single genius, but several pieces of work and trial and error to safeguard our men at sea.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

Plum cleared a space on the table and spread out the evening paper. We put the fox on it, and opened a Manila envelope. Sarah moved close to scrutinize the glossy prints of a man's hand—with teeth marks on it.

"We didn't blow any up to life size," Wes said. "No need. No fox. I did take an impression of the bite of the chef's pouch—but it wasn't at all similar."

"I'll get some calipers," Aggie volunteered. He ran up the stairs. The trooper looked at Sarah. "What's he got—besides this? It's sticking out all over him!"

"I don't know." "I hope it's something good!" Wes walked to the cold hearth and back. "I'll run down leads on Bogarty till I hate the name. And there's no trace of the gold. Either Calder or Davis cleaned it out before they died, or else whoever took it has planted it somewhere. But not in a bank and not in a deposit box, I'll guarantee it."

Aggie returned with the calipers and the paraffin top of a jelly glass. He thrust the paraffin between the jaws of the dead fox, pushed them together, and set the impression thus made beside the photograph. "Crude," he said as he worked, "but adequate." He bent over. "They look identical. We'll take a half dozen measurements and compare their ratios."

"They went to work on the measurements. Aggie took them—first from the paraffin and then from the photograph. Sarah wrote them down. After fifteen minutes he said, "That ought to do," and calculated. "Checks!" he soon reported. "I'd buy the idea that this fox bit Calder before he died—and after he walked out of this room. Proving that Calder saw Bogarty."

"Proving nothing of the sort," Aggie answered. "Proving—merely—that Calder saw Bogarty's fox. Or maybe—vice versa, only. We have piled up a mountain of information and we have done only a pint of thinking."

"You haven't been watching me awake nights!" Wes said. "I mean—real thinking. Speculation. Pushing out in the blue. For example, have you ever thought that Hank Bogarty may never have reached Indian Stones?"

"That's impossible!"

Aggie grinned. "Is it? Prove it! We know that his car got as far as Upper Lake—and went in it. We know that his fox got loose—and we now have the fox. We know his fox bit Calder—and since foxes—even reasonably tame ones—don't just rush up and bite men, we can assume this fox, at the time of the biting, was on a leash, or in a car, or something of that sort. But does that demonstrate Hank Bogarty was on the other end of the leash or at the wheel of the car? Not positively. We know that Hank Bogarty's knife pinned his calling card to Sarah's door—or—at least—I think it was the same knife. We know Bogarty's knife was found in George Davis's heart—because you sent the knife out to Seattle and the man who made it identified it. We know the calling card was Hank's—because you sent that out. We know Hank was in Albany—because the clerk at the telephone office identified him from a photograph made in Seattle."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the trooper. Aggie chuckled. "We know all that—but not any of it proves Hank was here. Let us say, purely for argument, that somebody knew he was coming and caught up with him in Albany. Let us say this person killed Hank, set him in a barrel of cement and threw him in the Hudson—or otherwise effectively disposed of the body. This person then drove to Indian Stones with the car, the fox, the knife, the calling cards—and anything else that may yet turn up. The car—"

"We slapped his knee. 'Sure! The car is driven into the lake! A cinch! The card is stuck to Sarah's door—for her to find. But you put the knife on the rail, Calder picks it up, the murderer is around with the fox on a leash—Calder runs into them—the murderer bungee Calder one on the head—because being seen with that fox would give him away! He gets back Hank's knife from Calder's person! The murderer lets the fox go—or it escapes. From there on—the murderer only has to go on making it look as if Bogarty were around to keep me, and the newspapers, and everybody, looking for Hank—instead of somebody else! The trooper's excitement faded. "Except for one thing."

"Exactly," said Aggie. Sarah looked blank. "Exactly what?"

"We glanced at Aggie. "How does this murderer pass through a locked and bolted door—or a window the size of a book—to put that knife in Dr. Davis? Or—did Davis kill himself—after all? Had he stolen the money in the cellar—and did he come across Hank's knife somehow—and use it?"

"No," Sarah said. "George never did!"

"Then I wish," Wes grunted, "you could explain what did happen in that darkroom!"

"I can," Aggie answered. "It was simple. Finding out—was what put me onto the theory of blue-sky thinking." Nobody interrupted him as he described, meticulously, the two trees he had seen at the summerhouse—the tree with the scars and the tree with the knothole. "In other words," he said, "if you think of the knothole as the little window—and the big tree as Davis—you get the picture. Somebody threw that knife into Davis."

Sarah gasped. "I thought of that long ago. But I didn't believe you could throw a knife hard enough—"

Important openings for expanding the interests, enlarging the scope of both financial and personal influence and popularity are noted. Promotions, preferment or favors from influential sources are in order, but sound and worthy plans, and efforts must be in evidence. Stick to reliable, dependable and firm tactics and sidestep intrigues, schemers of business or social designs.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for an opportunity to expand business, financial and personal prestige, solidity and importance, due to worldly enterprise, efforts and reasonable ambitions, in which much may depend upon the influence of those in power. Seek favors, promotion or preferment from such, but be alert to involvements, social or business with those of sinister intent or subtle intrigues. High principle and meritorious work assure pleasant and profitable gratification in home and business.

A child born on this day will have efficiency and merit for gaining attention from those in influence, although there may be temptations to fall into easy or tricky intrigues.

LOW DOUBLES ESSENTIAL

THERE is no such thing as a fine bidder who refuses ever to make a business double of a low bid by the opponents. "Not me!" I wouldn't make a penalty double of a bid of one; it is the way some otherwise fair players talk. And some of them will add: "If we can set their bid of one, I always figure we should score more by playing the hand ourselves." What a chance North had for a double. Having failed to double 1-Spade, his job was most emphatically to double on his second opportunity. The opponents, out on a limb, could not have fled to any safe place.

There was South trying to play the hand in a mighty tough contract. He did the best he could, but was not quite thorough enough. West scored the snide K, then switched to the heart 9 to get that re-entry for spades out of the dummy. The J was covered by the Q and the K won. Seeing a chance to set up a spade, and wanting a trump entry to dummy, South led the diamond 3. West took with the Q and led a second heart, which the A won.

Then the spade Q was led from dummy. South intended to discard his last heart on it and force West to use his spade A. The diamond J would then be a re-entry to dummy to use the spade J for discard of the small club. The idea was fine, but it was wrecked when East, who held no more spades, ruffed the Q with his diamond 9. That enabled West to hold on to his spade A, and compelled South to go down one, losing one trick in diamonds, one in spades, one in hearts and two in clubs—or, to put it in spades if he saw fit to discard on the Q instead of over-ruffing East. He could have made that play work, however, if he had taken an early round of trumps to get East out of diamonds when the spade Q was led.

Draft, Lend-Lease Acts
Up to Current Congress

Price and Wage Control
On Congressional Docket

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Thus far Congress has devoted the present session to two things—manpower legislation and the nomination of former Vice President Henry A. Wallace to be secretary of commerce. But a lot of other business will be coming along.

The Senate and the House will have to consider in the next few months bills extending the main features of the Selective Service act, the Lend Lease act and Price and Wage Control laws. Major provisions of the Selective Service act expire May 15, and the Lend Lease and Price and Wage Control acts expire June 30.

Bills appropriating additional billions to carry on the war and to maintain the different government agencies will be coming up for action.

President Roosevelt has not yet submitted his expanded social security program, or recommendations for compulsory post-war military training, or for reducing the gold reserve requirements of the federal reserve banks. These things were promised in his "State of the Union" and budget messages to Congress.

Pending is a bill sponsored by several Democratic senators to carry out the projected Wallace program for full post-war employment.

If the proposed world security organization is worked out in a full-dress United Nations conference following the "Big Three" meeting, the Senate and perhaps the House will have to pass on treaties or legislation putting it into effect.

The only possibility, however, of House action would be if legislation itself becomes necessary—as the Senate is guarding jealously its constitutional monopoly on treaty ratification.

THE PROJECTED DEFENSE OF BERLIN against the surging Red tide of the Soviet armies is generally felt to be the decision of Adolf Hitler himself and not of the German high command.

Although the Junker military caste was reputed to be in the saddle on the eastern front after Hitler's intuition got the Nazis into trouble, Washington military sources feel that the Fuehrer is once again making the final decisions which will crash Germany down to ultimate and utter defeat.

One main reason is that the German high command—old disciples of the famed military strategist von Clausewitz—would never have edged the Nazis toward their present unsurmountable difficulties if there were any way out.

Masters of retreat, military improvisation and delay, the Junkers could conceivably have staved off the Russians for many months. But Hitler's plan produced a rout.

In the second place, Hitler, Propaganda Minister Josef Goebbels, Hermann Goering and their henchmen are determined to go down in a blaze of Wagnerian drama—a bloody twilight of the gods snatched from the pages of Teutonic mythology.

The shades of Siegfried, the Valkyries and Wotan are descending over Berlin, and Hitler apparently is satisfied that if the end must come, it must come in this way. His oft-repeated utterance that Germany either would win or vanish as a nation appears no longer to have been the mere wagging of a psychopath's tongue.

Paraphrasing, some observers are wondering whether the German people and their intoxicating heritage of legendary warriors and crusading knights will feel constrained, after Hitler's last lethal fling and his death, to take much interest in the "Niebelungenlied" and its literary offshoots.

TO SALUTE RUSSIA

MUSIC OF RUSSIA will be featured by Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" all-girl orchestra and choir, in a program saluting the heroic Red Army and the people of the Soviet, Sunday. The violinist Evelyn, the soprano Kathryn and the contralto Francine are featured as soloists with the orchestra and choir, in a program which includes the "Russian Sailor Dance" from Glier's "Red Poppy Ballet," Alabieff's "Russian Night-ingale Song," "Two Sparkling Eyes," "Song of the Volga Boat-men," Tchaikovsky's "None But the Lonely Heart," the traditional "Dark Eyes," and Shostakovich's "United Nations Hymn," dedicated to the fighting men of all the United Nations.

HOME PROBLEM STUDIED

A serious home front problem, the bitterness of families who have lost men in the war, will be dramatized on "Assignment Home," in its broadcast Saturday, Maj. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, Director of Personnel for Army Service Forces, will describe what his department is doing toward the solution of this problem. The drama is written by Sgt. Arthur Laurens, and directed by Major Ed Byron. Major Harry Salter conducts the ASF band in the program's music.

GROUCHO MARX GUEST

Groucho Marx sets out to prove he would be no slouch-o as a gaucher, when he joins the Andrew Sisters and Riders of the Purple Sage in singing "Go West, Young Man," in the course of a guest appearance on the Andrew Sisters Show Sunday. He'll join in comedy with the feminine trio, and with Alamo (Dewey Markham) and Gabby Hayes, the talking mop.

WARREN BUSY

Leonard Warren of the Metropolitan Opera, who will be guest soloist on Sunday of the "Metropolitan Opera Presents" is still upholding his title of the "busiest baritone at the Met." Warren has just returned from an extensive concert tour of the South and West and in his first eight days back in New York is doing three Met performances--"Faust," "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "Rigo-lette," in addition to his guest appearance on the "Metropolitan Opera Presents."

RADIO NEWS NOTES

The one question Clifford Gold-smith, author of the "The Aldrich Family," is asked most frequently is where he gets his ideas for his program, which is now in its seventh broadcast year. His answer is simply that they come directly from Goldsmith's family crises. The Goldsmiths have three boys, not to mention a young lady of two. Says Goldsmith: "Frankly they don't owe me a cent. In fact, probably no father in America is any better supported by his children than I am."

Frank De Vol, is known in radio as one of the top music arrangers in the business, but his early air experience was as a singing comedian. He began singing with George Olsen's orchestra and kept it up when he joined Horace Heidt's troupe on the air and in theatres. Today, in addition to batoning Rudy Valee's air band, he's conducting and doing comedy on "Music Depreciation" program.

The first platters made by Kate Smith after the waxing ban was lifted were "Don't Fence Me In," backed by "There Goes That Song Again." Both tunes have since sky-rocketed to the hit class.

Some of the GI's who snare Blue Network "Blind Dates" with glam-our girls also win a chance for future stardom. Already, one service man whose flashing wit brought him a free Stork Club date has been signed to a screen test contract after the war. On the latest Monday night wit-and-won session, Seaman Ray Zergler of Flanderteau, S. D., stopped the show and won over a "Blind Date" darling with his baritone rendition of "Too Ra Loo Ra Loo Ra." Now Ray's post-war future is assured for a topnotch maestro has offered the gob a contract to sing with his band!

A new course in "Picturesque Spanish America" at Boston University involves the use of more than 6000 colored slides objectively revealing not only the natural beauties but the achievements of genius

Nine Charter Members At Rotary Anniversary Celebration

R. L. BREHMER SCORES PERFECT IN ATTENDANCE

Club Meetings Attended Regularly Over Period Of 23 Years

Nine of the charter members were present Thursday when the Circleville Rotary club celebrated the 23rd anniversary of the organization of the local club at the regular meeting held in Pickaway Arms. Ten of the original members when the club was formed February 23, 1922, are still active members.

Charter members present at the meeting, which also observed the 40th anniversary of Rotary International, were: C. R. Barnhart, R. L. Brehmer, Fred Clark, H. B. Colwell, T. O. Gilliland, C. T. Gilmore, Paul Johnson, John Ryan and Clark Will. Karl Herrmann, also a charter member, was absent.

Members with perfect attendance records were honored at the meeting. Mr. Brehmer led the list with a record of perfect attendance for 23 years. Others presented with perfect attendance buttons were: Fred Clark, 19 years; Charles May, 16 years; Dr. G. D. Phillips, 10 years; George Griffith, nine years; Frank Barnhill, 10 years; Meeker Terwilliger, nine years; Leslie May, eight years; Clark Will, six years, and several others with shorter terms of attendance.

Rotary International had its start in Chicago 40 years ago when members of various trades and professions started a club. First meetings were held in members' places of business. In 1941 there were 5,089 clubs scattered over the United States and other countries and several have been added since the war started.

The Circleville club held its first meetings in the basement of the First Methodist church. Harry Stevens was the first president. The membership has grown until there are 52 members at present.

The Rotary motto is "Service Above Self". The four objectives are: Development of acquaintance and opportunity to serve; development and application of high ethical understanding in a members' professions; service to one's community; to promote better international understanding.

Dr. Phillips Speaks
Speaker at the meeting Thursday was Dr. Phillips. His subject was "Time to Celebrate". He compared the life of George Washington and teachings of Rotary.

Edwin B. Jury, new manager of the Ohio Consolidated Telephone company, was a guest at the meeting.

First Ashore

trolled by pressure of the dominant elements, then there have been some happy, if vague, reports that the Europeans are so sick of totalitarianism, they may electorally turn against the dominant Communist regimes in Poland, Yugoslavia, etc.

If the Poles lose, well, the Poles are split anyway (and incidentally their protests were surprisingly mild.)

If Russia, directing reparations, is apt to take slave labor out of Germany, that is not so far from the Morgenthau plan of industrial seizure, which Mr. Roosevelt never disavowed (this is a contradiction because Germany would have to keep her industries in order to pay the kind of reparations Russia will exact.)

This is what you hear here—a fatalistic determination to accept everything in the best possible light, with fingers crossed.
